RECIPE MANAGER

PROJECT DESCRIPTION

I chose to create a recipe manager program because of my own personal interest in managing the many family recipes I have strewn about inside of multiple cookbooks. My strategy was to have separate modules to prevent the files from becoming too cumbersome to look through. There is a separate module for the database methods and the recipe management methods that will be used by the Recipe Manager program. The program would provide an interface for the user to simplify usability.

DESIGN

In an effort to embrace the DOS program-like interface, I chose to start up the program with some ASCII art of a little house surrounded by lace. My hope is that this doily-style design would give off some nostalgic charm. Beyond that, the program's interface is made up mostly of numbered menus and prompts for user input to facilitate interactivity.
